J. R. SMITH URGES SLATON TO APPOINT FORMER GOV. BROWN

Letter to Governor and Return of Clark Howell to Atlanta Complicates the Political Situation

HOWELL IS EXPECTED TO TALK WITH GOVERNOR SOON

Editor Now Refuses to Discuss Politics — Friends of Others Mentioned Still Besieging Governor

Two developments calculated to have diametrically opposite effects on the situation occurred Monday morning to involve interest in the appointment of a United States senator by Governor Slaton for the ad interim term caused by the death of the late Senator Bacon. Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, who had advised the governor, returned to the state Monday, and Dr. J. R. Smith wrote to the governor formally presenting the name of ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown as a suitable candidate for the vacancy. Mr. Smith was Governor Brown's campaign manager in all the recent elections.

Mr. Howell had no statement to make upon his return. He preferred first to listen to the views of the governor before commenting, and it is probable that, after walking through some four or five hours of listening, he will see the governor for the first time since the death of Senator Bacon, and will then advise him that he may have a very important bearing on the result.

"Please don't quote me. I have nothing to say," said Mr. Howell. "I have been away from the city and know nothing."

The news of Mr. Howell's return to Atlanta was widely general, the political men in the funeral of Senator Bacon. When he left, his press in Atlanta was indicative of a friendly attitude, believing that a conference between the governor and the editor would clarify the situation considerably.

Finally the heat occasioned by Mr. Howell's return permeated the corridors of the capital and rotunda of the statehouse, and it was decided that Mr. R. Smith had given to the press a letter had written to the governor, formally announcing his return.

REBELS BLOW UP A TRAIN, KILLING 55 MEXICAN FEDERALS

Explosion Annihilates Com-

Way to Jalapa From Mex-

TRAIN FOLLOWING HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Wreck Occurred Near Lima Station on Inter-Oceanic Railway — English Engineer
Was Killed

VERA CRUZ, Feb. 23.—A government troop train carrying a company of infantry from Mexico City, destined for Jalapa, was blown up on Saturday afternoon by rebels. The wreck occurred near the Lima station on the interoceanic railway, 140 miles from Vera Cruz.

The explosion was terrific and the entire train was demolished. All on board, including 55 officers and men and 100 horses, were killed.

A passenger train which was following in the wake of the troop train was fired on by the rebels but escaped by backing rapidly.

PROFESSOR ADVOCATES INVASION OF MEXICO BY POWERS

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 23.—Invasion of Mexico by the world's chief powers, the United States included, at the time of the Boxer rebellion, was advocated by Dr. Cyrus Northrop, president emeritus of the University of Minnesota, in the solution of the republic's dissensions.

"The United States should forgive the Mexicans for their sins and then difficulty would be for the United States to ask all European nations to come along to help Mexico to protect their citizens and property. Then all of them, including the United States, might move at the end and leave Mexico in a settled state."

Dr. Northrop is president of the Minnesota Academy of Science and would clarify the situation considerably.

OTHERS BELIEVED KILLED

ST. PAUL, Feb. 23.—Troops authorized at Juarez and Chihuahua to day were spurred to unusual efforts to find Captain Harry Compton and a ranchero named Curtis, all believed to be killed by rebels. George V. Edwards, American Consul at Juarez, and Letcher at Chihuahua, reached the scene of the trouble and sent Special Agent Bryan to proceed directly to Juarez.

"It was known that Curtis and Laurence had been captured and were endeavoring to go directly to Juarez and to tell him what he thought of him" and that he had been captured and was being held in Juarez.

GOVERNOR BROWN, AS YOU KNOW,
is unique in his record, well and favorably known throughout the nation and nation, as well as of the Democratic party, demand that we should have a trial, and you are right. As a critical period in our history, and have some problems at home and abroad, the trial must be handled by the present administration.

While I am personally in full agreement with Governor Brown, I am aware of the fact that if appointed, he would serve the state faithfully and well, I am praying for your support.

Feeling that it will meet with your approval, I am enclosing a copy of the letter. I am quite sure that it is your preference that the trial be discussed in the open rather than behind closed doors.

Give us a Little Joe.

Yours very truly,
J. R. SMITH.

For the first time since his return to Atlanta, from the funeral of Senator
Bacon, Mr. Howell has been seen.

He had an opportunity to consider the letters and telegrams that have deluged his office.

A delegation from Macon, headed by Mayor Bridget Smith, was on hand to urge him to accept the position of Colonel Boeffield, and G. Rufus Hutchens, of Romney, W. Va.

TRADE COMMISSION BILL TAKEN UP BY COMMITTEE

President Wilson's Views Are Expected to Prevail in Drafting Important Measure

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Work on drafting an interstate trade commission bill for a corporation trust legislation was undertaken today by the Senate committee on commerce. Representative Covington, of Maryland, chairman, will draft the bill for the committee.

The views of President Wilson, who has recommended a similar measure, will be first in importance among the provisions of the bill, it was agreed.

It is proposed to give many big business men to the discretion of the trade commission, but how it will be fixed is still to be decid.

The president has suggested the difference in terms of dollars and that it might be impartial to have a conservatively $5,000,000 capitalization from the commision's inquisitorial powers.

Some of the views are likely to be embodied in the subcommittee's draft of the bill, it was understood.

That all corporations, joint stock companies and corporate combinations subject to the bill must file with the committee all information, statements and records of their organization,

business, financial condition, practices and relations to other concerns of the same class and answer specific questions the committee may ask at any time.

PROVISION FOR FINE.

That no corporation or on reasonable complaint by any person or corporation or firm, the commission "may"

and "shall" investigate the organization,

conduct and affairs of any corporation or combination, and if any such is found violating the law, the commission may general setting forth these acts and practices will, for the offending concern to become part of the record.

That the commission report congress by December 1st each year giving an account of the work done and contravene the limitations on publicity allowing additional legislation.

EXPRESS CASHIER KILLED
IN FIGHT WITH BURGLAR

Former Employee Is Captured
and Confesses to Crime.
Police Declare

CORNING, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Harry Edwards, night cashier of an express company here, was shot and killed yesterday morning by a burglar. Edwards, who is only twenty years old, was captured and, according to police, was a former employee of the company and had been given permission to sleep in the office. Edwards' revolver was found in his pocket and he drew it and shot the burglar.

After assuring himself that Edwards was dead, the police say, made the rounds of the city, secured a safe and got a $10,000 currency ship.

Finding he could not open the safe, Edwards, unable to get help, lay in the snow in the street until the police came.

He was found in the snow, but the bullet was put on the seat, but lost the trail.

EDWARDS WAS KILLED DURING AS A POSSIBLE SOURCE OF INFORMATION, FOUND IN HIS SHIRT COVERED WITH BLOOD AND A RECENTLY PURCHASED CLOTHING IN THE MATTRESS OF HIS BED.

The remarkable part about the whole was that nobody got hurt. Once a was moved to another location.

The tired fire ladders were served

After Taking Money From His Safe to Avoid Robbery, Is Held Up

While taking $100 in cash from his safe at 265 Peters street for fear robbers would break in, he was snatched and robbed of the money by three early Sunday night.

Gershon went to his store about 7 o'clock and took the money out of the safe. He had feared that the youths would break in so many Atlanta houses recently on Sunday nights when he had been struck by a negro.

The police advised to challenge all negroes who came near the store, make affidavit and see that it is accompanied by a law enforcement agent.

According to the police, one of the men snatched him, knocking him unconscious, and the other two snatched the negroes and the money were gone.

The police are making a most searching investigation and have arrested several negroes recently on Sunday nights when they have been struck by a negro.

The women were advised to challenge all negroes who came near the store, make affidavit and see that it is accompanied by a law enforcement agent.

PLAN AID FOR FARMERS

Representatives of Department of Farm Improvement Meeting in Atlanta

To discuss plans for aiding farmers of the South in securing larger yields by the adoption of scientific methods, representatives of the department of farm improvement work of the Southern Railway and associated companies, with members of the Georgia State Board of Poultry and Egg Department, met at the Piedmont hotel Monday morning for a two-day conference. The meeting was opened under the direction of J. C. Williams, of New York, president of the Southern Railway, and is being presided over by T. O. Plunkett, manager of the department of farm improvement.

A fine address by Dr. Andrew M. Patterson, president of the State College of Agriculture, in which he urged the farmers to make a strong appeal in favor of the adoption of scientific agricultural methods, was made. The features of the program addressed also were delivered by Mayor W. E. Moore, of Atlanta; W. C. Southern's farm experts to Atlanta and congratulated them on what the county commissioners and the state legislature did for agriculture; J. D. Price, state commissioners of agriculture; Dr. J. P. Campbell, state entomologist; J. Phil Campbell, state agent of the United States Department of Agriculture; Dr. Cyrus C. Howell, state geologist; and others.

It was twenty-seven years ago that John H. Patterson first became interested in the business of systematic stores. In stores, twenty-seven years in which he has been a retailer, he has come into general use the insurance business.

The idea was first conceived by a man on an ocean steamer from America to England, where Patterson was then. In those days he had some sort of record register to show how much space was taken up. As there was no time to watch it thought to himself that if he could get a machine to do this work he would have more effective cooperation. We will be here to help you.

It was twenty-seven years ago that John H. Patterson first became interested in the business of systematic stores. In stores, twenty-seven years in which he has been a retailer, he has come into general use the insurance business.

"That man was in a mining concern in which I was interested out west. We had been losing money right along and we had to close up. It was about that time that accounts became so mixed up. We applied the register plan and it worked well."

"Some of us saw that what was good for one could be good for all. We formed a store in the country. We formed a company, some time later, to back their idea. The others who were involved heard about it and soon withdrew."

"E. M. Redwine, who owns the store in North Portland, when a store was opened in the station house, he came in since December 1 to February 21, indicating his store has been broken into twice in a year," he said.

"Five times they broke a lock on the front door and walked right in. He reported to the police and the police sliced off the glass in the window and replaced it. I never could catch 'em and though I told the police each time they came in that they were bad men. I'm glad they're gone now. That's all. We want protection down here."

"O. S. Cony, of 11 Piedmont avenue, next door to Redwine, chimed in with his story. His store twice within the last three months to the tune of $100 or more."

"He was told his store was broken into again and he called the police. He said, 'I'll call you again if they do it again.'

"They broke in the front door three times and he said they would have got more if they did it again. He said, 'I'll call you again if they do it again.'

"Each of the three men show broken locks for exhibit A."

The Worthy Purpose

Of the Players' Club.

If there were need of any additional circumstance to interest all Atlantians in the performance of the Players' Club Tuesday evening, the fact that the proceeds of the occasion will be given to a fund for a contagious-disease hospital for negroes should more than suffice.

An organization that is devoted to the fostering of sound dramatic taste requires no other ground of commendation. The Players' Club represents a very wholesome and admirable idea, and its realization of "The Genius" will be well worth seeing, regardless of the excellent use to which the box receipts will be turned.

The Club is to be congratulated, however, upon its civic patriotism in having decided that the proceeds of the evening shall go to a cause that vitally concerns the community's health and well-being.

It is not necessary to explain Atlanta's urgent need of a hospital for contagious diseases among negroes. The fact that the city has no such institution speaks loudly enough for itself. The mayor, the Council, the board of health and all thoughtful citizens realize the far-reaching importance of providing a hospital of this kind with the least possible delay. Indeed, it is a matter that involves the entire public's security.

The Players' Club will thus aid a cause that lies peculiarly close to the city's practical and human interest. On that account as well as for its general character and purpose, the Club merits a particularly cordial reception at its appearance Tuesday evening.

Advertising the State's Health.

Until a year or two ago, Virginia, like Georgia, had no system for the registration of births and deaths, and accordingly had no standing in the country's official health record, no certified figures to which it could point as proof of its healthfulness. Realizing the heavy disadvantage at which the State was thus held, the Legislature enacted a vital statistics law; and in 1913 Virginia was admitted to the so-called "registration" area. It is now credited in the report of the federal census bureau with a death rate of only thirteen and nine-tenths per thousand, a notably good showing as compared with that of the country as a whole. The Richmond Times-Dispatch remarks with warranted enthusiasm that "the good of the Commonwealth and its regard for the welfare of its people are thus advertised for the first time."

There lies one of the far-reaching services of a State bureau of vital statistics; it gives effective publicity to facts in which home-seekers are particularly interested. Some time ago, the story goes, an Idaho man who thought of moving his family to South Georgia wrote the United States health office, asking for information as to "the death rate and health record of the county he had in mind." The officials had to reply that they were unable to furnish the facts desired because Georgia had no system of vital statistics. In the case of Virginia, exact data could have been readily secured and the prospective settler would have had no further hesitancy. Indeed, her excellent health record is made known throughout the nation and the world, for the reports of the census bureaus are read everywhere, and they are authoritative.

Georgia is doing much to exploit its natural resources. As a means towards increasing its wealth and population and development, it is advertising the growth of its industries, the richness and variety of its agricultural products, the blandness of its climate, the broad range of its opportunities; and on all these points, there is definite, convincing evidence. But when it comes to the supremely significant matter of healthfulness, there is no record to which we can point; and so, the greatest of our natural assets lies its due appeal.

It is inconceivable that Georgia will continue to neglect this important phase of its practical interest. A vital statistics bill was introduced at the last session of the Legislature and was cordially received in both Houses; but in the press of other measures it failed of actual passage. There should be no delay in urging this bill to enactment next summer. Boars of trade as well as health authorities and physicians should concentrate their influence to that end; for, until we do have an adequate system for registering vital statistics, the State's economic progress will be seriously handicapped.

More important than any of these considerations is the fact that a system of vital statistics is essential to human well-being. Such records are aptly called "life-and-death bookkeeping." They are indispensable to health departments both State and municipal. In order, that diseases may be successfully combated their origin and extent must be known. Particularly is this true of typhoid, malaria, plague, tuberculosis and other maladies that concern the community no less than the individual. A Bureau of vital statistics, with its complete record of births, deaths and causes of death, furnishes the exact information which health officials must have if their work is to count for definite, permanent results. Without such knowledge they grope, and whatever progress is made will be that of a lucky chance rather than of a dependable plan.

It is noteworthy in this connection that the common country's health record has steadily improved as the registration area has widened. An authority on the subject declares:

"How slow and yet how sure is the growth of the registration area for American vital statistics is shown by the Census Bureau's mortality figures for 1912, reporting the lowest death rate yet—13.9 per 1,000—in an area now covering 82 per cent of the population. Missouri, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Minnesota are among the latest States to enforce the registration of births and deaths. In 1880, when the mortality rate was 18.8 per 1,000, the registration area was 17 per cent of the population; in 1900, the mortality rate was 15.5, while the area has risen to 37.9; in 1910 mortality had dropped to 15 per 1,000, and the registration area increased to 58.3 per cent. The connection between a growth in areas of accurate statistics and the betterment of national health is narrow, but clear; one of the most potent weapons of State, city, and national sanitation must be reliable measures and standards of population, birth, sickness and death. For this reason it is urgent that the Census Bureau and the various humanitarian and medical agencies should succeed in their endeavors to widen the field in which such figures are available."

The welfare of all our counties and all our homes demand that the State no longer neglect its duty in this regard. Georgia is at a disadvantage with neighboring States that have established systems for recording vital statistics. It is at a grievous disadvantage in the rooting out of disease within its own borders and upholding the welfare of its own people. The Legislature should act promptly at its next session.

Private Business and Public Office.

The English seem very particular in their dislike of suspicious relationships between private interests and public office.

A member of Parliament has been fined sixty-five thousand because the firm of which he is the head had a contract with the British government while he was in the House of Commons.

If that principle were thoroughly applied to municipal affairs in the United States, what a hury-bury there would be among some groups of politicians!

It had been applied years ago to the administration of our larger cities; a vast deal of scandal and graft would have been averted, tax payers would have been more adequately served, and in many instances there would have been a very different type of offenders.

If government is to be for the people and by them, it must be kept scrupulously clear of private business influence.

In this land of plenty there are plenty of people who haven't.

The girl who can't sing and won't sing is entitled to her choice of husbands.

It is easier for the average man to stand adversity than prosperity, and much more common.

Quips and Quiddities

A visitor one day mentioned to Voltaire that he had recently come into town with Albrecht von Waller, the Swiss physiologist.

"Voltaire," he said, "is a great man, a great poet, a great naturalist, a great philosopher—a man of wonderful accomplishments."

"What is he, then?" asked Voltaire.

"All the more creditable to you, insomuch as von Waller does not you the same justice."

Albrecht replied Voltaire with a grim smile. "Very likely we are both infidels."

JUDGE SPEER DENIES ALL CHARGES

JURIST FILES REPLY TO CHARGES AGAINST HIM

Says He Saved Central instead of Wrecking It, as Lawton Charged

Special Dispatch to The Journal. — MACKENZIE LAWTON, Atlanta, Georgia, has filed a reply to the charges he made against Judge Speer, in which he asserted that the jurist had, with a tenure of service as long as his, never been so grossly negligent as to subject the Federal Government to the expense of an investigation made against him in the Federal "investigation by a committee of Congress" of the official misconduct.

The good lawyer, positive dental, legal and medical, who has been ever guilty of official misconduct, has given tenacity to the charge that Judge Speer's judicial services were not worth seven cents printed pages. "I will never fail to earn the record of the most zealous and courageous champion for the cause," he said, "and I am the professional advocate and representative of evils which have been in the public eye for years."

ANSWERS EVERY CHARGE.

He has also filed a reply to the charges made against him, Judge Speer, in his suit, despite assertions that he was not even a member of the Georgia bar, territorial, and arbitrary while on the bench, and that he had submitted to the Journal photographic copies of letters from several legal organizations, and from men of influence, informing him of all the difficulties of using the United States circuit court of appeals.

Referring to the charge that he had failed to exhaust his remedies in the United States supreme court, Judge Speer said that he had done so, "but overalls on its merits, but because he had not exhausted his remedies in the state courts."

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA CASE. — The court rejected the accusation that he wrecked the Central of Georgia railroad in 1882 by an alleged "malicious intent." The court also rejected the assertion that he saved the road from being absorbed by the Richmond, Augusta and St. Louis Railroad. Judge Speer denied that, he has ever been guilty of any such conduct, and in drawing justifications and claims that his every action was sanctioned by the court, he was giving the court the benefit of his services.

PROBED "TWO WEEKS." — The court also rejected the charge that Judge Speer was directed by the house committee on judiciary, after formal examination of the records, to be admitted to the body. Sessions fifteen minutes, and the committee, after investigating committee at Macon, and the investigating committee at Atlanta, was given permission to submit a report to the Executive Committee, which report was submitted.

IMPROVEMENT OF SPRING STREET STRONGLY URGED

Committee Gives Many Reasons Why Project Should Be Carried Through

The Spring Street Improvement committee is advocating many reasons why the improvement of Spring street should be carried through.

One of the main arguments is that property owners are disgruntled largely because they have been taxed heavily.

It is proposed that the work be done at the cost of $1,647 in jewels.

When John W. Somerville, of 227 Myrtle street, looked for a jewel pin which he had lost, he found it. When he searched for it, he was discovered to have been taxed heavily.

British Newspapers Want Action on Benton Case

LONDON, Feb. 22.—British papers through the British Isles today gave a prominent place to information and demands for action on the case of Benton, the British subject, by General Villa, the Mexican rebel leader, the general later having denied that he was responsible for the execution of the rebel chief or the Mexican populace generally.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

Conley was arraigned yesterday, pleaded guilty to the charge. Though Conley had been indicted for the killing of Mary Phagan, he was released on bail.

Solicitor Dorsey will contend that it is the defense which has asked for the execution of the condemned.

MARY PHAGAN'S HAIR.

After Assistant Solicitor Stephen began his examination of Frank Hill, he found that Mrs. Mattie White from Terrell, Texas, had identified the hair of Harry Scott, following with the testimony of Monteith, Mrs. J. W. Collier, Mrs. George Jefferson.

W. H. GHEELING. The state's first and only witness, was called then to the hair of Harry Scott, "the boy in Mary Phagan's body in charge."

"When you took her to the undertaker, what did you say when you took her hair?" asked the solicitor.

"We didn't think pine tar soap."

"What color did it have on its color?"

"It lighter. Washington always makes hair lighter."

"How long after she died?"

"About 56 hours later."

"Was there any further change then? don't think so."

"What sort of hair did Mary Phagan have?"

"She was long and very thick."

"Does that mean her hair grow rapidly?"

"Does her hair grow after death?"

"I don't know if it grows in others case."

STATE REGES CARE.

Solicitor Dorsey then stated to the court, by agreement of both sides, the facts of the case. Let me add, he said, on the stand that Mary Phagan was in the factory, was never seen alive after that date, and was last seen at the trial that blood was found on the floor of the factory, and pointed out that spot, Mr. Conley as the place where he dropped the body. Dr. Claude Smith examined the negro, and found a large amount of stain on them was blood. The solicitor then asked the negro to identify the negro, and of Dr. H. P. Ogleby, who was present, that he was the state rested its case.

The American government has undertaken to protect British subjects in Mexico, and to act to prompt and effective in the present case is clear.

"We cannot believe that the United States would let General Villa and Great Britain to Huerta for satisfaction. Such a policy would be inconsistent with the principles of justice which President Wilson must feel for Mexico."
